DOYLE URGES GOLF COURSE REVITALIZATION, SEEKS DESIGN REVIEW FOR CHURCHVILLE PARK

Monroe County Executive Jack Doyle today asked the legislature to authorize a contract for design services for improvements at Churchville Park Golf Course.

"A Master Plan for the Golf Course and Churchville Park has not been updated since the original development of the park," said Doyle. "This design project will involve a review for potential drainage and irrigation improvements, layout modifications, and look closely at expansion possibilities including a learning center and club house upgrades or replacement. The design process will also include announced public participation opportunities."

The project, as proposed by Doyle, would involve an inventory and analysis of existing conditions and park environmental features, development of goals and objectives, preparation of alternative plans, a consensus plan, cost estimates and phasing, and completion of environmental review requirements. The available construction budget for the Phase I project for golf course improvements is approximately $1,170,000. The Phase I design for the improvements will provide complete services through construction documents and project bidding for the highest priority golf course projects identified in the master plan process.

Acceptance of the proposal is subject to approval by the Legislature in May, 2000.
